Ciano Statement Hints Nazis Didn't Really Plan War

Italy, Germany Pledged

Italy Needed Time,
After Ethiopia and Spain

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Ciano declared Saturday Italy is staying out of the European war by agreement with her ally, Germany, and reaffirmed Mussolini's readiness to help restore peace.

Ciano disclosed that Germany and Italy agreed last May to avoid raising any question that might arouse any new disputes in at least three years while both countries completed rearmament.

He said the Germans were informed that Italy considered three years necessary to bring its war preparations to the maximum level "because of the heavy drain of the Ethiopian and Spanish wars."

Ciano charged that British-French negotiations with Russia brought about the Moscow, Berlin alliance. He said Italy agreed with Germany last spring "to a policy of lessening tension with regard to Russia."

Guernsey, Emmet Split Two Games

Emmet Girls Win But Senior Boys Are Defeated

EMMET, Ark.—Emmet senior boys were defeated by the Guernsey team by a score of 18 to 26. The Guernsey Blue Devils started the scoring and kept the lead throughout the game. Malon for Emmet was high point man of the game with 9, closely trailed by Wise with 8. High point man for Guernsey was Willis Downs with 8, closely followed by Rothwell and D. Cox, with 7 each.

Emmet girls won over the Guernsey girls by a score of 45 to 16. Although the Blue Devils were outclassed they never gave up, but played hard all the way. Reyenga was high point for Emmet with 22, closely followed by Crabb with 20. Edwards was high for Guernsey with 11.

The junior boys game was the most exciting and interesting game played. Emmet took an early lead and was out in front of the half by a score of 8 to 2. After the midway period the Little Blue Devils came back with a determination and won the game 13 to 10. Calhoun for Guernsey was high point man of the game with 9. Neal was outstanding on defense. Dougan was high for Emmet with 6.

Decisive Battle Is in Making for Finn and Russian Forces

Motorized Russian Troops Roll South Against
New Defense Line

JLESENKI, Finland.—(AP)—Possible a decisive battle in northern Finland appeared likely Saturday near Pitkanjari as motorized Russian troops rolled south.

The Finns reported they had occupied new defense lines near the Norwegian-Finnish frontier after a retreat southwest from Salnjarvi.

North of Lake Ladoga, in the Middle Country, the Finns were reported driving the Russians toward dangerous swamps.

Christmas Seal Sale Is Success

Workers Over State
Report Sales Are High

"Our high hopes at the beginning of this year's Christmas Seal campaign have been more than justified by results of the first two weeks," Interior Revenue Collector Homer M. Adkins, president of the Arkansas Tuberculosis Association and state chairman of the sale, said this week.

Purchases of Seals have been so good that workers throughout the state have been running out of materials, he said, and have been wiring the state officials for more. "This in turn has forced the state organization to order more from national headquarters."

"Early reports indicate tremendous activity," Mr. Adkins said. "All news is hopeful and we are confident we shall reach our goal of $40,000. An especially encouraging sign is that we are receiving many requests for Christmas Seal bonds which are purchased by large contributors who have no use for hundreds of Christmas Seals."

Mr. Adkins said this early success was due to the most extensive organization in the history of the fight against tuberculosis. Seal sale committees are functioning in every county in the state.

"The sale will continue through Christmas and we must not let down now," he concluded. "Tuberculosis is one of our greatest enemies and it is only through the concerted effort of all of us that we shall be able to raise sufficient funds to combat it effectively."

The public is invited to attend the community singing at Liberty Hill Sunday night.

Christmas Carols Through the Ages

WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED THEIR FLOCKS

"While shepherds watched their flocks by night
All seated on the ground,
The angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around..."

No Christmas is complete without the story and picture of shepherds tending their flocks as the Star of Bethlehem shines brightly overhead. Inspired in the late 17th century by such a tableau, Nahum Tate, friend of the poet Dryden, wrote the words to this widely sung English hymn-carol.

Unreported

Goodfellow campaign committees reported at noon Saturday a total of $127.90. The drive will continue through next Wednesday.

All funds are expected to be in by that time as it will require the other three days before Christmas to purchase supplies, wrap and distribute them to Hope's needy families.

Unreported at noon Saturday were Hope's industrial plants, WPA office, Farm Security office and Soil Conservation office. The total is expected to be swelled considerably when these reports are tabulated.

Attorney General Is Defied by Board

Insists on Right to Remove County Welfare Head

LITTLE ROCK.—Friday's developments in the controversy between the Pulaski county Welfare Board and State Welfare Commissioner John R. Thompson over removal of Mrs. Ora Nix as Pulaski county welfare director included the following:

1. State Welfare Board voted unanimously to support Mr. Thompson's announced intention to defy a ruling by Attorney General Jack Holt governing discharge of county welfare directors.
2. The Pulaski county Welfare Board discussed the possibility of bringing quo warranto or injunctive proceedings in the courts to restore Mrs. Nix as director.
3. Mr. Thompson issued a statement challenging the attorney general's opinion as being unofficial and quoting legal authorities to support his contention that the welfare commissioner has authority over hiring and firing of county welfare personnel.

The state welfare commissioner said the next move in the controversy was up to the Pulaski county board since he would continue to insist that Mrs. Nix remain out as Pulaski county director.

He was backed up in this position by the State Welfare board which voted to endorse any steps necessary to support him in his contention that the welfare commissioner has hiring and firing privileges over county welfare employees.

The Pulaski county Welfare Board discussed with Prosecuting Attorney Pat McNulty possible court action to restore Mrs. Nix in event Mr. Thompson refuses to abide by the attorney general's ruling. Mr. McNulty told the board he would look up the law in the case and would confer with Mr. Holt and Mr. Thompson.

Should the county board go through with the court proceedings to restore Mrs. Nix, the move would place the attorney general in the position of defending the welfare commissioner's case. Mr. Thompson said in this event he would ask permission to handle his own case. He is a lawyer.

Official rulings of the attorney general have the effect of law until overruled by the courts but unofficial opinions have no legal status. Mr. Holt insisted his opinion to John Pruniski, chairman of the Pulaski county Welfare Board, was an official opinion.

Mr. Thompson took issue with the attorney general on this point, saying, "The opinion of the attorney general was directed to a non-constitutional officer who is a subordinate to the state Board of Public Welfare and the opinion not being directed to the commissioner of public welfare and should not be recognized as an official opinion of the attorney general to the state Welfare Department."

Mr. Holt, ruling on an inquiry from Mr. Pruniski, said Thursday that "after appointments have been made legally by the county board we think the county board is the only agency that may discharge them."

The welfare commissioner said Mr. Holt's ruling was "merely the latest of a series of conflicting opinions which the state's attorney general has given regarding powers of the state Welfare Department's commissioner."

DECISION SUNDAY

Graf Spee Must Leave
Sunday or Be Interned

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay.—(AP)—Germany's trapped sea fortress, the pocket-battleship Admiral Graf Spee, faced a quick decision Saturday whether to dare the Allied might off Montevideo to another battle or be interned for the duration of the war.

The Uruguayan government gave Captain Hans Langsdorff until 2:30 p. m. (Hope time) Sunday to get out of port if he wanted to keep his vessel, one of Germany's three fast, heavily-armed pocket-battleships.

Waiting outside the harbor was a "strongly reinforced" Allied fleet which the Germans said included the following:

- One battle-cruiser
- An aircraft carrier
- One heavy cruiser
- Two light cruisers
- Two or three destroyers

Captain Langsdorff was under no illusions of the risk should he choose to run the gauntlet.

In the first authoritative statement, on the battle last Wednesday with three British cruisers he gave credence to the claim that the German pocket battleship was "more than seemed credible." Lack of fuel, he said, forced him to fight under a disadvantage.

Uruguay lodged representations with both Britain and Germany against fighting in River Plate waters.

Ordered to Leave
MONTEVIDEO.—(AP)—Uruguay early Saturday gave the German raider Admiral Graf Spee the choice of sailing Sunday night to sea, where British warships are waiting to sink her, or accepting internment in this neutral port for the duration of the war.

The government handed its ultimatum—sail by 5 p. m. Sunday (2:30 p. m. Hope time) or be interned—to the commander of the crippled pocket battleship shortly after midnight. Uruguay acted after an Uruguayan Naval Board inspected the Graf Spee in Montevideo harbor and recommended such a step.

The Graf Spee entered Montevideo harbor last Wednesday midnight after a 14-hour battle with three British cruisers, the Exeter, Achilles and Ajax, the Exeter was shot up also but the other two took up positions just outside territorial waters, waiting to resume the fight if the Graf Spee comes out.

It was indicated that another British cruiser, the Cumberland, had joined them and the French battleship Dunkerque—one of five Allied warships said to be capable of dealing alone with the Graf Spee—was reported en route to join the cordon.

Britain Files Protest
Action of the Naval Board was announced shortly before midnight several hours after Great Britain had made a second diplomatic demand that the Graf Spee either be interned or forced to leave. Previous by the Uruguayan Foreign Office had announced Germany would be permitted to make the Graf Spee "seaworthy."

Subsequently Uruguayan Foreign Minister Guani asked the Naval Board to look over the Graf Spee and define how long she might be permitted to remain in this neutral port to be made "seaworthy" without simultaneously being made "combat-worthy." This definition was made necessary by the blunt British demand.

While only the board's recommendation was known, it was believed based on the reasoning argued by British officials that the Graf Spee was perfectly seaworthy and now could strike equipment—and if it did it would compromise seriously the strict neutrality of Uruguay.

Protest Extension of Time
The second British note included a protest that the Graf Spee had been permitted to remain in Montevideo harbor for more than 24 hours without being made "seaworthy."

WASHINGTON.—Current wise-crack here is that there must be something special about Antioch College, in Yellow Springs, O., because both Dr. William M. Leiserson and Dr. A. E. Morgan came from its faculty.

Dr. Morgan, ex-member of TVA, took the witness stand before a Senate committee a little over a year ago and talked at great length about the shortcomings of his TVA colleagues and the group's mistakes in policy. Barb on the job is that Dr. Leiserson has just been on the stand before the Smith committee, and his criticisms of fellow NLRB members and the board's policies have been spread on the record.

As a matter of fact, Dr. Leiserson couldn't help himself.

Relief Loads Still Weigh Heavily

The perennial end-of-the-year relief crises are likely to spring up almost anywhere. Sometime a little financial legerdemain can overcome the pre-Christmas distress of indigent families.

But even the most astute balance of municipal budgets can solve the problem only temporarily. It will probably hob up again, when funds have been exhausted late in 1940. Despite the billions of dollars the federal government has poured into states and municipalities in the forms of direct and indirect relief, the burden of feeding and sheltering its unfortunate still weighs heavily on every community.

In August of this year, there were 1,382,000 cases on direct relief in all of the 48 states. A case may be either a single person or a family of four or eight or 16. The aggregate bill for feeding and housing these people was $38,088,000—for a single month.

The average monthly expenditure for every relief case during the month of August, taken as a representative month, was $24.07. But the mean payment was considerably lower than this when considered on the basis of the average payment made by each state. Half of the states spent less than $14 per cas in August.

Highest payments were recorded in the more heavily populated states, particularly in the east. This would explain the $10 difference between the mean payments of states and the average national expenditure.

Expenditures per case range all the way from $3.33 in Oklahoma to $34.28 in New York. These are average figures, so that some Oklahoma relief cases were granted less than $3.33 in supplies in August.

It has been argued that the variation is due partly to varied living expenses in different sections. To a point this is true; but that scarcely explains the $9.01 average in Virginia, which lies just south of Maryland where $22.41 was spent on each case. Nor does it explain why Arizona should spend $12.38 per case while New Mexico puts out only $6.44.

A simpler answer is that payments are not based so much on need as they are on the ability or willingness of the states to pay.

All of the figures given represent only amounts contributed by states for the relief of their own indigents. They do not take into consideration the tremendous allotments made by the national government for WPA, PWA, NYA, and Farm Security aid. These agencies have ceased to be merely supplements to the local relief structures, have instead become virtually mainstays against utter distress.

It would seem that some system can be worked out so that the relief client in the southwest can be granted aid proportionate to that given the reliever in New York without increasing the load on the taxpayers.

Procedure for Reviving Patients After an Accident Is Detailed

(This is the second in a series of three articles by Dr. Fishburn on artificial respiration.)

When a person has been shocked by electricity, or has been taken unconscious from the water, seldom will the heart require stimulation, if artificial respiration has been started. A physician can aid by injecting drugs that act specifically on the heart. There is no way for the layman to help.

The average person breathes from 16 to 20 times per minute. Experts believe that artificial respiration movements should be given more rapidly than this, since sufficient air will not be taken in at that rate to comfort the patient. Some recommend that the rate be between 24 and 40 movements per minute.

According to a plan adopted by the American Red Cross and a number of large public and industrial agencies, the proper movements follow:

1. Lay the patient on his stomach, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on hand and forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing.
2. Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with your knees placed slightly below the projections of the hip bones. Place the palms of the hands on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, and the thumb and fingers in a natural position.

3. With the arms held straight, swing forward slowly, so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the head of the hand at the elbow at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

4. Now immediately swing backward so as to remove the pressure completely.

5. After two seconds swing forward again. Repeat unhurriedly 12 to 15 times a minute the double movement of compression and release.

6. Continue artificial respiration with out interruption until natural breathing is restored—if necessary, four hours or longer or until a physician declares the patient beyond aid.

7. As soon as artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest or waist. Keep the patient warm. Do not give any liquids until the patient is fully conscious.

8. To avoid strain on the heart when the patient revives, he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up.

9. Resuscitation should be carried on at the place where the patient received his injuries. He should not be moved from this point until he is breathing normally. Should it be necessary, due to extreme weather conditions, etc., to move the patient before he is breathing normally resuscitation should be carried on during the time he is being moved.

10. A brief return of natural respiration is not a certain indication for stopping the resuscitation. The patient must be watched and if natural breathing stops, artificial respiration should be resumed at once.

11. In carrying out resuscitation it may be necessary to change the operator. This change must be made without losing the rhythm of respiration.

NEXT: The use of artificial devices.

A Prayer For Holidays

Those who watch from wistful windows, while the world keeps holiday.

Lord, send down thy love to fold them; take the loneliness away.

There are many ah, so many, Lord for whom the dawn-light falls.

On barren fields of bitterness and moaning, empty walls.

Some are weary with false hopes, some are heart-broken by cruel facts.

Some are mother-hearted yearning for lost foot-falls down the street; some are sick for dreams long vanished.

Some have lost a comrade's shoulder and must take the road alone.

Little, watching, wistful windows, white farms ringed with northern fl.

Pillared porches and lattices where the jangled dusk-winds stir;

Sun-baked cabin flanked with sage-brush city marble terraced white.

Or a steamer's port holes streaming gold against a starless night.

Bless the patience and the waiting with the tread of honing feet.

Four the wretched and the weary, wine of courage, golden-sweet.

To the fettered bring the promise of far trails and sunny skies.

For the doubting and the lonely, set new faith within their eyes.

Those who watch from wistful windows, Lord, look down on them we pray;

Let thy love and comfort fold them, and their hearts keep holiday.

All members of the First Methodist Sunday school are requested to bring their gifts for the White Christmas to the Sunday morning Sunday school service.

The W. M. S. of the First Baptist church will hold its annual Christmas party Monday at 2:30 at the church. All members are urged to attend.

Dorsey Ray Fuller of Henderson State Teachers' college is spending the week-end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Homer Fuller.

The Women's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church will meet at 3 o'clock, Monday at the church.

In celebration of her sixth birthday anniversary, little Miss Nanette Williams, daughter of Mrs. Glenn Williams entertained a group of her young friends at a most delightful party Friday afternoon at the home of her aunt Misses Marie and Nannie Purkins. The Purkins home was gay and festive with Christmas decorations, and there was a beautiful cake with six glowing candles, attractive favors were given and many delightful games were played in the kindergarten room where a brilliant Christmas tree featured the decorations. Fruit punch was served with the birthday cake.

Mrs. Homer Fuller and daughter, Miss Phanie and Curtis Breeding and Thomas Quimby motored to Arkadelphia to see the football game Friday afternoon between the Henderson upper classmen and the freshmen.

The N. Y. A. girls entertained at a most delightful Christmas party, Thursday evening, December 14 at the home of Mrs. W. Y. Foster on North Main street. The rooms were beautifully decorated with Yule-tide reminders, and vases of yellow chrysanthemums, in one corner of the long room stood the Christmas tree, resplendent in all its finery of tinsel, bright ornaments and shining lights, bearing gifts for each guest and a special gift from the girls for their Supervisor, Mrs. Foster. Games and dancing was enjoyed to the tune of a splendid orchestra including Joe McCutley, Winfred Huckabee, Arthur

Yule Luxury Not Matter of Dollars

Gifts Enjoyed If Something Person Would Not Buy for Self

By MARIAN YOUNG
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—Regardless of its size or price or whether it is a familiar object or a unique one, the gift which he wants but simply wouldn't think of buying for himself is the ideal luxury present for any person on your Christmas shopping list.

Mention of luxury gifts conjures up visions of fabulous jewels and lavish furs, of course. And, to the woman who has everything, these are about the only items which will seem luxurious. To the average woman, however, anything that is slightly out of the price range her budget allows will be considered a luxury indeed.

The same holds true for her husband and other members of the family.

The man who travels infrequently and, consequently, never has bothered to do much about the luggage situation might be pleased with a handsome bag of finest leather. The woman who feels that she must get along with a single evening wrap certainly would be happy to have another one.

Five Underwear Is Good Choice

"Among the luxury gifts which are sure to delight any woman on your list are: pure silk handmade underwear, finished with finest lace or embroidery; a quilted satin negligee, cut like a housecoat; an evening bag—very small but equipped with change purse, comb and cigarette compartment as well as regular makeup items.

Muffs are fashion news this winter. If she has a fur coat, give her a muff to match it. If her winter coat is unfurrowed, choose an enormous muff of silver fox, mink, beaver, Alaska seal skin or some other luxurious fur. Or you might give her a fur-trimmed bag or a gift order for a fur hat.

Also luxurious for women are: velvet house slippers with gold kid heels and piping; heart-shaped earrings that cover the bottom of the ear but do not dangle and which may be made of diamonds and rubies or brilliant-cut garnets depending on your pocket-book; an evergreen tree-shaped lapel gadget from which dangle assorted gold charms; a quaintly old-fashioned, long-sleeved nightgown of heavy white satin with chiffon inserts around the neckline.

For man or woman, monogrammed stationery and monogrammed handkerchiefs and scarfs are luxurious. Simple monograms are smarter this year than intricate elaborate ones. Etched, modern motifs and plain block letters take first place.

Dress shirts, fine dress gloves, raw silk sports shirts in natural color, cashmere sweaters, a generous gift order on his favorite men's furnishings store, sheer wool hose, a windbreaker of softest suede and a top hat are among the luxury gifts that are one hundred per cent sure to please men.

Select "Hobby" Gifts With Care

The hobbyist will quite naturally appreciate the gift which will add to further enjoyment of his hobby. However, unless your own hobby happens to be the same, don't rely entirely on your own judgment in choosing gifts for a man in this category. Consult an authority on the subject.

For the young girl, beautiful accessories, a new party dress, handknit sweaters, evening stockings pastel cued gloves or a makeup kit are acceptable luxury items. For boys, consider sports equipment of all kinds, evening jewelry, monogrammed pen and pencil sets, furnishings to make his room seem more truly his.

Finally, if you get stuck for an idea, solve the quandary by remembering that every woman considers a bottle of perfume a luxury, no matter how much perfume she already has.

Bruce Catton Says

he was writing memos to his fellow-members speaking of "usual irregularities of procedure" in the secretary's office and saying that such-an-such a case "smelled." He was also moving to dismiss the board's secretary, Nathan Witt.

All of this, it is argued, indicates pretty clearly that Dr. Leiserson had been given reason to feel, when he took his appointment, that his job was to do something in the way of a clean-up.

The doctor, incidentally, is about the mildest-mannered witness a congressional committee has had since J. P. Morgan held the midge in his lip. He speaks softly, smiles pleasantly, and puffs at a pipe which has not yet stayed lit longer than 20 seconds.

A few weeks ago this correspondent spent an hour talking with him. During that hour Dr. Leiserson used an entire clip of matches to light his pipe.

Anti-Trust Probe Gets Private Books

Anti-Trust division is about to probe the alleged monopoly of a big industrial concern.

A few days ago a top official of the company notified Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold that the division could have free access to all of the company's most private records.

"Now that you people have had the nerve to go after the labor unions," he remarked, "I've come to the conclusion that you're really sincere."

Interest

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace attended a dinner party recently, and none of the conversation seemed to interest him. Before, during and after the meal he held a moody silence.

His hostess later noticed him sitting on a divan in animated conversation. Wondering what topic finally touched the spring, she drew near to hear him say, "Yes, it is a fact that there are more pigs in Iowa than in any other state."

SERIAL STORY

SANTA CLAUS BROWN

BY MILDRED GILMAN
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Jerry Donaldson, spoiled, pampered son of the department store owner, arrives home, announces he has quit school. His mother pleads with him, shows him the Christmas tree she has decorated, as if for a child. Jerry slams out of the house.

CHAPTER IV

ALICE BANKS trudged through the snow toward her home—the large boarding house next door to the Carters'. She was joined by Mrs. Brown, Santa Claus Brown's wife, a kindly middle-aged woman who also lived at the unpretentious boarding house. Mrs. Brown fell into step with her.

"How are you, Mrs. Brown," Alice greeted her. "And how is Santa Claus Brown?" Then she added the inevitable, "Any word from your daughter?"

At the mention of her daughter, Mrs. Brown bristled with pride. "Frances? Why would I expect to hear from her, busy as she is? It's not that the girl is selfish so much—she's just so busy; that's why she doesn't have time for us. And children, once they get away from home—I'll bet you don't write to your mother as often as you ought, Miss Banks."

"I would if I had a mother to write to," responded Alice.

"There it is," said Mrs. Brown hastily. "You'd write but you have no mother. My Frances has a mother and she doesn't write. That's the way life goes."

SHE changed the subject abruptly. "I don't know what's keeping my husband!" Mrs. Brown added. "This is a busy time of year for Santa Claus Brown," Alice said. "Bless his heart, he wouldn't stint the children for anything. Some of the little ones believe in him so. He's as close to being the real Santa as any human being could be. Remember the toys he mended for the little ones last year—while he was watching the factory nights?"

"Yes, he ruined his poor eyes doing it. Couldn't mend a single one this year. There was no stopping him last year. Never was when he got his heart set on making something for Frances, either. He shouldn't work so late though. It's awful bad for his rheumatism, coming home in all this snow."

"Why doesn't Mr. Donaldson bring him home in the car when he's so late? He lives so near."

"Well," said Mrs. Brown, "I guess he never thinks of it. Easy to remember dad when they want extra work done, when they want a Santa Claus for a party. He's been with Mr. Donaldson 20 years this Christmas, night watchman."

Alice Banks

and Santa Claus during the season, ever since Frances was 2 years old."

"It's hard to think of him as old or young," remarked Alice. "He's just always—Santa Claus—to all of us."

Mrs. Brown nodded across the street.

"There's Jim Carter, shoveling snow," she said. "Poor man, at this time of the evening—and on Christmas Eve."

THEY walked along in silence, each occupied with her own thoughts. As they approached Mrs. Deakin's grim boarding house, Mrs. Brown spoke:

"Well, I hoped we'd all have enough saved up to move out of here by this Christmas—maybe next year."

"It's handy to the school," said Alice.

Mrs. Deakin was in the midst of an argument with her boarder of longest standing, Mr. Middleton, known to the other boarders as "Deadbeat" Middleton.

Middleton bowed impressively as Alice and Mrs. Brown came in. He was elegantly dressed in gay nineties style, his gray hair neatly combed, his mustache nicely pointed. "Deadbeat" Middleton was always the last word in dignity.

"Dear Mrs. Deakin is trying to ject me," she smiled deprecatingly, "on Christmas Eve. I can't seem to make her understand that my monthly remittance—ah—check—is a bit late this month. Christmas rush in the mails, you know—accounts for many lost letters."

Mrs. Deakin was unimpressed. Alice took a roll of bills from her purse and handed them to Mrs. Deakin.

"Here, I can't have you throw anybody out on Christmas Eve," she said.

MIDDLETON once more bowed impressively from the waist.

"My dear Miss Alice, it will be only a matter of a few days. I shall reimburse you at the earliest opportunity."

"Heard anything from that daughter of yours yet?" Mrs. Deakin asked Mrs. Brown bluntly.

"You'd think Christmas time she could spend a penny for a card for her ma, or a quarter for one of those number telegrams."

"You have no idea how busy my Frances is," answered Mrs. Brown huffily. "She's probably told one of her secretaries to send us something and the secretary didn't do it. You can't depend on secretaries nowadays. Have to do things yourself to get them done right."

"You're telling me you have to do things yourself?" exclaimed Mrs. Deakin. "Look at me, every week I have to fire what they send me from the agency for a cook!"

"Maybe if you gave 'em something to cook with instead of half spoiled leftovers—" muttered Mrs. Brown, speaking low so that Mrs. Deakin couldn't quite hear.

"What's that you said?" asked Mrs. Deakin. Then she turned to Alice. "Say, Alice, do me a favor. You still have your things on—I don't want to get wet. Go to the corner and buy me three lemons—don't pay over a dime for 'em either, make 'em give 'em to you for a dime. I think—I'll make a lemon pie."

"Using real lemons, Mrs. Deakin?" Alice asked with mock seriousness.

"Yes, it's Christmas. Besides, I'm out of lemon extract. Run along for me like a good girl. You have some money with you, haven't you?"

Alice went out, exasperated. This was an old story.

She pulled her coat collar up about her face and as she hurried down the street, ran head on into someone coming the other way. She looked up to apologize, and then exclaimed in surprise:

"Jerry Donaldson! Where'd you drop from?"

Texas Rates Slight Edge in Four-Way Scramble for Southwest Cage Honors

By JERRY BRONDFIELD
NEA Service Sports Writer

Far-famed as a production center for great football teams, the south west should make its strongest bid in history for national basketball prominence this winter. Four teams are expected to make it a photo finish in the race for league honors and two of them are likely contenders for national honors.

How the Kicking Started that Night

ROANOKE, Va.—(AP)—Statisticians calculated it could happen only once in 54,000 cuttings of a deck of cards.

Six married couples here, comprising the Sleepy Hollow Bridge Club, met regularly for 11 years and cut cards for partners. One night recently, the cutting paired man and wife as partners in all six couples. That's the way they were paired for the first hand over a decade ago.

Yeah, But Look at George Washington

INDIANAPOLIS—(AP)—Six boys ranging in age from 11 to 14 played pioneer too realistically.

They were caught chopping down trees on Pleasant Run boulevard.

They and their parents were ordered before Sergeant Charles Weddle of the police.

World Beats a Path

BROOKFIELD, Mo.—(AP)—William Reece has mice but virtually no mouse trouble. Some of the white kind colonized in his junkyard. Now Reece has a waiting list of youngsters who want them for pets.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

Jay Franklin often writes with his eyes on far stars. If that causes him sometimes to stumble, it is still good to have some eyes on the stars.

"The Future Is Ours" (Modern Age: 50 cents) is an account of the place of TVA as a forecast of the America which might be. To idealists, it will be thrilling; to the pragmatists, merely starchy-eyed. Hege is a forward look.

This is the central weakness in our order of battle. Our ten million unemployed are our greatest asset. Their existence means that America can support ten million men outside of the normal channels of production and trade, that there are ten million men available for some great national purpose, if we can discover such a purpose.

Little aims will not do. Neither the finest of concrete roads nor the grandest of steel bridges is large enough. For there is a job to be done—the job of saving the Mississippi Valley for our grandchildren and saving our grandchildren and saving our civilization for the riches which it can inherit.

This calls for war on a hundred fronts but with a single purpose—in C. C. C. camps, with dams and navigation channels, levees and trans-mission lines, soil conservation, reforestation, education, control of disease, improved diet, better housing, thriftier farming, sounder economics, more co-operative politics, less individualism, less legalism, more courage, more tenacity, more imagination.

Here is the substance of the real American dream the dream which we can make come true if only we learn to master ourselves and grapple with our national destiny like men.

MIND YOUR MANNERS

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. When sacred music is sung outside a church may it be applauded?
 2. If you enter a church as a prayer is being said, may you go down the aisle to a seat, if you do so quietly?
 3. How is a bride's wedding ring usually marked today?
 4. Does the bridegroom or the best man usually hand the clergyman his fee?
 5. What is the conventional gift of the bridegroom to the bride? What would you do if—
You are a girl arriving at a movie with a man, and there is a line at the ticket window.
Would you—
(a) Stand beside the man as he waits in line?
(b) Stand away from the line and out of the way of those entering the theatre?
- Answers
1. No, it should not be, as it is a form of worship.
2. No. Wait until the end of the prayer.
3. R. L. M. and F. C. L. Sept. 10, 1938.
4. The best man, though it is given to him by the groom.
5. A piece of jewelry.
Best "What Would You Do?" solution—(b).

Salvage

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Virginia county welfare departments have found a rich source of containers for preserved fruits and vegetables. Police departments have turned over hundreds of half-gallon jars—the famed containers of the South's illegal "moonshine liquor."

The University of Rochester (N. Y.) hasn't quite enough tuxedos for all its faculty members when formal dinner parties are held. The professors probably draw straws to determine who will not have to wear those available.
